TRUE humility never prompts any one to underrate himself, or to make loose and general confessions of weakness and wickedness, the particulars of which he would indignantly resent. It is as far removed from the "pride which apes humility" as from the pride which struts in haughty arrogance. It leads to a lowly estimate of self, not that we may shrink and crouch and stoop, but that we may aspire and strive and rise. It is the beginning of a higher life, the promise of a nobler future.

ONE fretter or despairer can destroy he peace of a family, can destroy the harmony of neighborhoods, can unsettle the councils of cities, and hinder the legislation of nations. He who frets or esponds is never the one who mends who repairs evil; more, he discourages enfeebles, and too often disables those round him, who, but for the gloom and depression of his company, would do good work and keep up good cheer. The effect upon a sensitive person in the mere presence of such a being is indescribable. It is to the soul what a cold icy mist is to the body-more chilling than the bitterest storm.

To know how to dwell in the present not merely contentedly, but intelligent ly and teachably, affords the best promse for future usefulness and happiness. If a faint drag is detected suggestive of the presence of a fox, but scarcely sufficient to be sworn to vocally, the tail of the finder is at once set in motion, and the warmer the scent the quicker does it join the first, and there is an assemblage of waving tails before ever the least

Should the drag prove a doubtful one the hounds separate again and the waving ceases; but if it grows stronger when followed up the wagging becomes more and more emphatic until one after angive tongue, and stream off in Indian file along the line of scent. The whole question of tail wagging is a very interesting one. All dogs wag granting a policy?" their tails when pleased, and the movement is generally understood by their human associates as an intimation that they are happy. But when we attempt to discover the reason why pleasure should be expressed in this way the explanation appears at first a very difficult one. All physical attributes of living beings are, upon the evolutionary hypothesis, traceable to some actual need, past or present. The old and delightfully conclusive dictum that things are as they are because they were made so at the beginning no longer can be put forward seriously outside the pulpit or the nursery. No doubt in many cases-as, for inmystery seems unfathomable. But this only results from our defective knowledge of data upon which to build the bridge of deductive argument. The reason is there all the time could we but reach it, and almost daily we are able to account for mysterious and apparently anomalous phenomena which utterly baffled our predecessors. Probably the manner in which domestic dogs express pleasure is owing to some interlocking of the machinery of cognate ideas. In order to understand this better it may own species. There can be no question that the chief delight of wild dogs, as with modern hounds and sporting dogs, is in the chase and its accompanying excitement and consequences. One of the most thrilling moments to the human hunter ity, is when the presence of game is first detected. As we have seen in watching the behavior in a pack of foxhounds, wagging is an almost invariable accompaniment of this form of pleasure, which known. is one of the chiefest among the agreeable emotions when in the wild state. It was therefore securely tucked away between the hind legs. The act of running away is naturally closely associated with the emotion of fear, and therefore this gesture of putting the tail between the legs becomes an invariable concomitant of retreat or submission in the presence of superior force. When a puppy taken out for an airing curves its tail downward and scuds in circles and half circles at fullest speed around its master. it is apparently trying to provoke its pseudo-cynic playfellow to pursue it in that gallery I saw an actor, which mock combat. It may be observed that this running in sharp curves, with frequent change of direction, is a common ruse with animals which are pursued by larger enemies. The reason of it is that the centrifugal impulse acts more pow erfully on the animal of larger bulk and so gives the smaller an advantage

A Possible Use for Serpents' Poison. The experiments which I have been making consist chiefly of soaking scraps of meat, bits of hard boiled eggs and things of that sort, in the poison of vipers and analyzing the changes which resulted in them after a given interval.
